

What is "Layman Theory"?

According to LONGMAN Dictionary of Contemporary English "Layman = someone who is untrained in a particular subject or type of work, especially when they are being compared with someone who is."

Getting trained means, getting whatever have already been acquired in the past. If you are getting trained, it means, you are being prepared for the management of something. We might have control over something known and presently world may regard us.

Now question arises, what for the next (i.e. coming life or invention)? For that we are layman and we have to encounter unknown and even don't know what will be then and what will be the result in the coming time. like layman we have to lead the life in the concerned field. so for the leadership we are layman.

It is said that the most uncommon thing on this planet is a common sense (i.e. a sense to response immediately and in no time). The common sense, the mostly required and mostly lacked thing, was the main concern in my life. Now I have found a way to develop this common sense or the way to get common sense or leadership or a path to unknown or path breaking way and I have named it as 'Layman Theory'.

So 'Layman Theory' may be called as a theory of being extraordinary. Remember, extraordinary does not mean having something extra but it means, being more (extra) ordinary (layman).
